

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

When a user touches any desired position on a display screen, a position detection section detects a specification
5 position on the display screen and a data processing control section controls to scroll a display area based on a positional relationship between the specification position detected by the position detection section and a predetermined position on the display screen, namely, the direction, the distance,
10 and the like.